RECENT POSITIONS

The George Washington University Regulatory Studies Center	Washington DC
Senior Policy Analyst	October 2017 – Present

- Lead independent and collaborative research examining the impact of U.S. regulations on innovation, firm dynamics, economic growth, and other macroeconomic outcomes, using theoretical economic models, advanced statistical methods (Python, R, Stata), and natural language processing on large datasets, including regulatory texts, patent documents, and firm and macroeconomic indicators.
- Collaborate with interdisciplinary faculty and scholars to produce peer-reviewed journal articles and applied policy research, using empirical econometric analyses to study regulatory impact analysis, bureaucratic behavior, and public participation in regulatory processes.
- Compile, visualize and analyze big data on federal rulemaking activities from government websites, APIs, and bulk data repositories in an automated manner using programming languages including Python and R.
- Optimize and maintain organizational databases on Github, dashboards, websites, and other data products.
- Supervise and mentor student research assistants and junior research staff, helping them build area expertise and hone research skills and supporting their professional and personal developments.
